

Responsive Teaching: Cognitive Science and Formative Assessment in Practice

SOK - Friday, 29th November, 2019

Harry Fletcher-Wood - @hfletcherwood
Ambition Institute

What's the problem and what does a solution look like?

How can we plan effectively and efficiently?

How can we respond to student understanding effectively?

Conclusions and next steps

Endemic problems

- 1) So much to teach, such short units
- 2) So much to teach, such short lessons
- 3) How do students know what good work looks like?

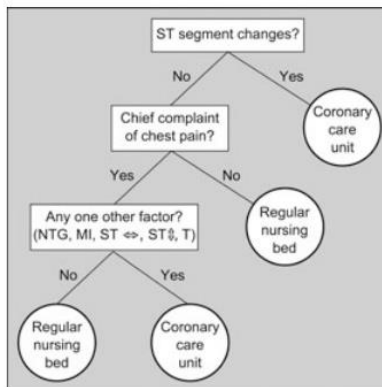

- 1) How did students do?
- 2) What are students thinking?
- 3) How can I help all students improve?

Unlike statistical optimization procedures, heuristics do not try to optimize (i.e., find the best solution), but rather satisfice (i.e., find a good-enough solution).

3 Subject content

The subject content for GCSE History states that the scope of study should include history:

- from three eras:
 - Medieval (500–1500)
 - Early Modern (1500–1750)
 - Modern (1750–present day)
- on three timescales:
 - short (depth study)
 - medium (period study)
 - long (thematic study)
- on three geographical contexts:
 - a locality (the historic environment)
 - Britain
 - European and/or wider world settings.

British history must form a minimum of 40% of the assessed content over the full course.

Students are required to study:

One thematic study.
This enables students to understand change and continuity across a long sweep of history. The study must cover all three specified eras.

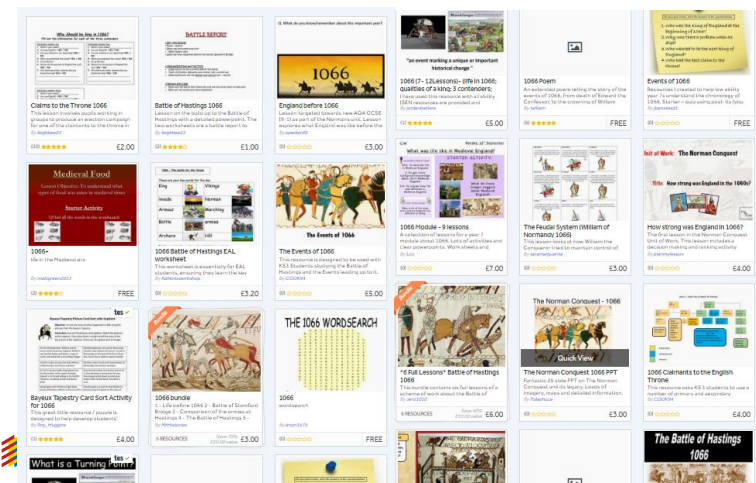

One period study.
This allows students to focus on a substantial and coherent medium time span of at least 50 years. The study will require students to understand an unfolding narrative of substantial developments and issues. The period study can be from any of the specified eras.

Two depth studies.
One British and one European/wider world. Depth studies enable students to focus on a substantial and coherent short time span. The studies enable students to gain understanding of the complexities of a locality or historical situation and the interplay of different aspects within it. Depth studies must be taken from different eras.

A study of the historic environment.
The study of the historic environment should focus on a particular site in its historical context and enable students to study the relationship between a place and historical events and developments. There is no requirement to visit the site. This study can be linked to any other part of the course or may stand alone.

The subject content for GCSE History requires that students follow a 'coherent and substantial study of history in which the elements are reasonably balanced'.

Decision rule #1

Plan the key points in a unit in advance

| Year 12 Figes Criteria | |
|------------------------|--|
| 1 | How personal accounts and detailed contemporary source material to exemplify and characterise a historical situation. Uses individual stories to explain or illustrate the bigger picture . "Bring evidence" |
| 2 | Relevant, rich, dense evidence used to support his argument. |
| 3 | Using multiple, carefully chosen , sources to support his argument. |
| 4 | Using the content (sometimes provenance) and context of contemporary source material AND other historians' arguments, to strengthen his argument/demonstrate alternative arguments. |
| 5 | Clear sense of argument - use of signposts and skilfully pulling "argument threads" together at the end of a paragraph/section/chapter. |
| 6 | Clear sense of where evidence fits into his argument, and the status it has. |
| 7 | Explains how and why things changed over time (causality) but without being stale or boring . Builds a picture . |
| Extra | Shows where his argument fits into what other historians have argued. |

| What would Figes do? (Action) | |

| | Section B |
| 1 | Re-draft this answer using feedback. |

Decision rule #3

If you want students to do something, show them a good one and a bad one first and let them compare.

Don't worry about copying

What's the problem and what does a solution look like?

How can we plan effectively and efficiently?

How can we respond to student understanding effectively?

Conclusions and next steps

Poor Proxies for Learning

(Easily observed, but not really about learning)

1. Students are busy: lots of work is done (especially written work)
2. Students are engaged, interested, motivated
3. Students are getting attention: feedback, explanations
4. Classroom is ordered, calm, under control
5. Curriculum has been 'covered' (ie presented to students in some form)
6. (At least some) students have supplied correct answers (whether or not they really understood them or could reproduce them independently)

Objective:

Students can add two fractions with shared, and with different, denominators.

Exit ticket:

$$1) \frac{2}{7} + \frac{3}{7} =$$

$$2) \frac{4}{5} + \frac{3}{5} =$$

$$3) \frac{1}{5} + \frac{2}{6} =$$

$$4) \frac{2}{3} + \frac{3}{4} =$$

Objective:

Students can explain what made Greek civilisation unique.

Exit ticket:

What made Greek civilisation unique?

Decision rule #4

Check what every student understood at the end of every lesson.

Don't:

- Rely on substitutes
- Assume it will stick
- Feel you have to mark it

How did life change in the Industrial Revolution?

Which of these shows a building from the Industrial revolution?

Decision rule #5

Put a hinge question in your lesson after you introduce the key idea

Don't worry about this until you're using exit tickets every lesson.

What do we need before we give feedback?

Decision rule #6

Give less feedback, get students to do more with it.

Don't worry about what/how much you're writing. Worry about how much they're improving.

What's the problem and what does a solution look like?

How can we respond to student understanding effectively?

Conclusions and next steps

Responsive teaching =

What do I want students to know/do?
(guidance from cognitive science)

What did students understand?
(guidance from formative assessment)

What do I do next?

Six decision rules

- 1) Plan the key points of the unit in advance (knowledge, representations, misconceptions, horizon knowledge)
- 2) Cut everything from the lesson except a single, academic purpose
- 3) If you want students to do something, show them a good one and a bad one first and let them compare.
- 4) Always check what everyone understood at the end of every lesson.
- 5) Put a hinge question in your lesson after you introduce the key idea
- 6) Give less feedback, get students to do more with it.

Responsiveness =
